Envision San Diego: the Innovation Economy

Subscribe

Envision San Diego: the Innovation Economy discusses the challenges San Diego faces in the wake of a global Internet-based economy and how best to meet them.

Envision is a "media partnership" formed by your local media to focus on those issues of most importance to the region - whether it is housing, healthcare, arts and culture or, of course, the coming elections. Who is leading the way? What do we do to meet the challenges? How can the two cultures of art and science be brought together? What role do telecommunications, biotech and biomedicine play in our future? We'll also discuss what is happening elsewhere in the world and talk with people who are making a difference. Envision San Diego: the Innovation Economy is on every Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. on SignOnRadio.com.

John Eger talks with Richard Kiy, President of the International Community Foundation (ICF), about their role in helping San Diego blur the borders with Baja; but importantly, help integrate the goals and ambitions of both communities to forge one powerful region. Founded in 1990 the ICF has grown substantially, and is now a factor in health care, the environment and art and culture. In future the ICF will bring government, academic and other non-profit enterprises together on common goals and strategies. With a new gift from the Walton Trust (the ICF new headquarters in National City) there are in the early stages of creating a new Center for Cross Border Philanthropy. www.icf.org.
